

Neues vom Cybersecurity Strategy Office

The Guardian (via Fefe): „A Japanese minister in charge of cybersecurity has provoked astonishment by admitting he has never used a computer in his professional life, and appearing confused by the concept of a USB drive.

Yoshitaka Sakurada, 68, is the deputy chief of the government's cybersecurity strategy office and also the minister in charge of the Olympic and Paralympic Games that Tokyo will host in 2020.

In parliament on Wednesday however, he admitted he doesn't use computers.“

Dann ist er ja für den Job genau der Richtige. Das wird bei uns auch nicht viel anders sein. Für was hat man schließlich Personal?
